

ROPE TRICKS

Recipe for excitement:

Two cowboys who can handle ropes.
Two quarterhorses which can move like shots from a gun.
A fleet steer with a good set of horns.
A stopwatch.

Mix together and you have the basic ingredients for the fastest growing event in rodeo—team roping.

The idea is simple. The steer gets a head start. Two riders, loops ready, pursue. One of them is the "header" and he must throw first; his object is to catch the steer round the horns. The second rider is the "heeler." He must throw his loop to catch the steer by the back legs.

Time is registered when the two riders have the steer under control and stretched between them, not necessarily on the ground, with both horses and riders facing the steer.

The sport is more humane than the old variety in which the steer was roped, then tripped at a full run, frequently with fatal results. The steers in team roping even wear plastic headbands to protect the animal against rope burns.

Penalties are enforced if a heeler catches only one rear leg or the header fails to make a clean catch. If he gets a front leg in his loop, no time. Each team has three loops to beat the clock.

In this team roping at the Ken Lance Arena, Ada, Okla., 80 teams tackled 10 steers each over a two-day roping—entrants came from seven states. The sport is fast. The action is hectic and spectators love it. There are no limitations on age. Grandfathers can compete—and do.

You must know how to use a rope. A good horse is essential, and from then on it's timing and teamwork, plus those useful extras which never hurt anyone, skill, "savvy" and a little nerve.

This Week's PICTURE SHOW by George Ginter and Don Cook

A rider moves in for a chance to catch the heels.

The steer is out and away, with both riders after it.

One team member has successfully looped the horns.

Going to be a winner.

A well-judged throw for the heels does the trick.

The steer's head is roped: protective headband visible.

Judy's Talent Flowers Into Big Business

By DICK KLEINER
West Coast Correspondent

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (NEA)

"Most women," Judy Spencer says, "are born with a sense of beauty."

Could be. But most women don't know how to turn that innate talent into a $1 million-a-year business in less than two years. That's what Judy Spencer has done.

In January of 1968, Judy Spencer was a housewife, a mother of four, a former legal secretary and a woman who dabbled. She and a friend had a business selling franchised cosmetics, but it didn't amount to much.

"I used to sew a lot," Judy says. "And I would redesign the patterns to make the finished dress my very own. Most women do that; they can do some little designing."

A month later, Judy had combined all her assets—the $200 financial asset, her little business experience and her artistic talent and gone into business for herself.

She had a product. She admits it wasn't a product that she dreamed up, but she did perfect it, as she had altered and adapted those dress patterns.

"There was this hobby item," she says, "and I'd seen it in people's homes. It had been around like the wheel. So I saw it and liked it and I made a batch."

What it was was a night-light in the form of a flower, the plastic petals surrounding a frosted bulb. She added a few touches of her own, took it to a friend named Henry Blankfort who is a marketing and management consultant and he liked it and called his friend who was a buyer for a major drugstore chain.

That same day, Judy Spencer walked into the buyer's office—scared and shy—and was confronted with a very businesslike man.

"He asked me questions like, 'What's the discount?' which I didn't know. I said, 'Huh?'"

But she had two things going for her. First, she had a product which seemed commercial—and, as it has turned out, is commercial. Second, she's 5 feet 9 inches of beautiful blonde. It all helps.

At that time, Judy had no package or box for her product. She showed her samples in cartons from the super-

One of the ultra-modern lead conventions is that the lead of the jack against a no-trump contract is either from ace-queen-jack or the top of the suit. In other words, it can't be from ace-jack-10 or king-jack-10.

We don't like this convention, because we have noted that the special information given is likely to be of more use to declarer than to partner. Still, it would work pretty well today since East could be sure that South would hold both the king and queen of hearts. Therefore, East's Analysis of the lead would be clear-cut and his plan of "How to beat the contract" would depend on an immediate shift to the king of clubs at trick two.

A good East would probably come to the same conclusion if his partner was using old-fashioned leads. It just would be easier this modern way.

Without that king play, declarer would go about the business of setting up dummy's diamond suit and would collect at least nine tricks. Against the king play, the best declarer can do is take dummy's ace immediately and lead out the king of diamonds. East must continue the dummy-killing campaign by ducking the queen also. After this series of plays by East, South will have to struggle along without the rest of the diamond suit. Assuming the defenders play carefully, he will not be able to collect more than eight tricks and will wind up one short of his game.

This particular play is usually called the Merrimac coup, although many authorities consider it to be a variation of the Deschappelles coup. In any event, this play consists of the sacrifice of a high honor to kill an entry to dummy.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper.

GUY WHO CAME TO DINNER, UNINVITED

Dear Helen: Don't you think it's bad manners for a guy to come in at dinner time and stand over the table talking to your brother? I think he should go and wait in the other room—or better yet, not barge in right at six p.m., when he knows we eat.

He's too old for Mom to say, "Wait in the den."—L.G.

Dear L: Maybe he's looking for a handout.

Your brother could handle this without too much trouble. Why doesn't he get a nudge from the family?—H.

Dear Helen: Here's another suggestion about cats who claw the furniture. They don't like smooth brocades, cottons, or soft velvets, or any other fabric they can't get their claws into. So when cat owners are buying, they should avoid the nubby materials.

Our cat scratched the heck out of a loop pile upholstered chair, and then I slip-covered it with sailcloth, and he ignores it. So I got a cheap loop scatter rug for him to dig into, as he would have nothing to do with my "Scratching post."

If you cover the sofa arms with clear plastic for the first few months (just pin it in place, maybe he won't get the habit). —BRIDE

Dear Bride: You're so right about the smooth fabrics! Since we switched to brocade in our living room, our cats are going psycho.—H.

Dear Helen: I hope this gem helps some of your readers as much as it helped me when I read it first: YESTERDAY, TODAY AND TOMORROW

There are two days in every week about which we should not worry, two days that should be kept free from fear and apprehension.

One of them is YESTERDAY with its mistakes and cards, its faults and blunders, its aches and pains. Yesterday has passed forever beyond our control.

All the money in the world cannot bring back Yesterday. We can't undo a single act we performed; we cannot erase a single word. Yesterday is gone.

The other day we should not worry about is TOMORROW, with its possible adversities, its burdens, its large promise and poor performance. Tomorrow is also beyond our control.

Tomorrow's sun will rise, either in splendor or behind a mask of clouds—but it will rise. Until it does, we have no stake in Tomorrow, for it is as yet unborn.

This leaves only TODAY. Any man can fight the battles of just one day. It is only when you and I add the burdens of those two awful eternities— YESTERDAY and TOMORROW that we break down.

It is not the experience of Today that drives men mad. It is the remorse and bitterness for something which happened yesterday, and the dread of what tomorrow will bring.

Let us, therefore, live but one day at a time!— ANONYMOUS

Little Bundle of Dynamite Ready To Explode in Broadway Musical

By JOAN CROSBY

NEA Entertainment Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) —

Huge eyes blink out from under marshmallow bangs. Two braids hang down either side of her small, pretty face, and her clothes are casual. She looks maybe 22 and her accent is pure cornpone.

She's Paula Wayne, and for one who remembers her as the sleek, sophisticated leading lady to Sammy Davis Jr. in "Golden Boy," it's hard to reconcile the little girl with the woman.

Paula, who appears on so many TV talk shows that she is nearly a regular, is certainly more woman than girl. She has two children, Laurel, 12, and Joseph, 10, by an early, unsuccessful marriage.

"I had Laurel when I was 17," she says. "We don't have any age gap, she and I. I'm wearing her clothes right now. She's taller than I am."

That's not difficult. Paula is a tiny 5-2½ and is anxiously trying to rid her frame of 10 pounds because "I saw myself on TV recently."

She's a bundle of dynamite when she performs, and she may very well detonate next season when she due to star on Broadway as "Cherie," the musical version of William Inge's "Bus Stop."

Her cornpone accent, which is natural since she's from Mountain View, Okla., Pop. 800 ("and I'll be from there the rest of my life"), is returning as she talks, since she is already immersing herself in "Cherie" rehearsals and the character of the innocent who dreams of show business glory.

She says she has changed tremendously since 1964, when she was in "Golden Boy" and received hate mail because she kissed Sammy on stage.

"I was trying to make a living for my kids," she muses. "It showed. I was hard. I'm not any more. I could be a huge star if I didn't mind cheating my children. But they're important to me. Sure, I was offered other musicals after 'Golden Boy,' but I didn't see any reason to follow that show with garbage. So I went into night clubs and waited until I was offered a good part."

Her operatic voice first brought Paula from Mountain View to New York. She was 16 and a freshman at Oklahoma State College for Women. Wilfrid Pelletier, a Metropolitan Opera conductor, heard Paula sing Marguerite in "Faust" and said it was the worst thing he ever heard, but the most beautiful voice. So he brought her to New York, where she lived and studied with Pelletier and his wife, Rose Hampton.

"I was 16, but I was about 10 by New York City standards," she says.

Opera proved not to be the way of life she wanted and, when she was old enough, she broke away and became a pop singer.

In the years between "Golden Boy" and now, she has developed a philosophy: "I'm not afraid any more. I've got my bag. If someone else gets ahead of me, it doesn't keep me from working. If I don't make a right turn and someone else becomes a success because of it, that's my fault. Yeah, I would like to be a big star. My ego would love that. But if I'm not the world's biggest star, I'm not going to slit my throat."

DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Q—What is the cause and cure of coated tongue?

A—The cause is a failure to chew thoroughly such tongue-cleansing foods as toast, nuts and raw fruits and vegetables. The coating is merely a layer of dead cells and not an indication of any disease.

Q—What would cause a black coating on my tongue? Is it serious?

A—This type of coating is caused by a fungus infection. It is not serious, but, if it can't be removed in a week or two by brushing your tongue with a toothbrush, you should see your doctor.

Q—What would cause my tongue to be swollen and sore? My doctor says I have glossitis. What is the best treatment for it?

A—Glossitis is an inflammation of the tongue. It may be caused by a deficiency of vitamin B, sprue or pernicious anemia. The key to successful treatment is discovery of the cause.

Q—A few weeks ago, my husband noticed that the cracks in his tongue are getting deeper. What causes this? Is it serious?

A—In the absence of any soreness, this is of no significance.

Q—I have had a geographic tongue off and on for four months. How can I get rid of it?

A—This is a common and harmless condition which clears up spontaneously but may come back from time to time. The beauty part is that no one will know you have it unless you tell them and then they won't believe you unless you show it to them.

Bucks Take Series With the Knicks

By BEN THOMAS
Associated Press Sports Writer
Alcindor's up to his old tricks again.

He's got the Milwaukee Bucks dreaming of championships just as UCLA did during the years the amazing athlete played there. Just as he did at Power Memorial Academy in New York.

In other words, Lew Alcindor became the first National Basketball Association team—oops, pardon the slip—The Milwaukee Bucks became the first team to advance to a divisional championship series in the NBA Friday night when they beat the Philadelphia 76ers 115-106.

Alcindor scored 46 points. It boosted his total for five playoff games to 181—an average just a shade over 36 points.

Chicago shot down the Atlanta Hawks, who were trying to make it four straight, in the night's other NBA playoff action winning 131-120.

Atlanta holds a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Western Division semifinals.

Los Angeles, behind 2-1, plays at Phoenix in tonight's only NBA action. The Los Angeles-Phoenix survivor takes on the Atlanta-Chicago series' winner for the Western Division title.

Milwaukee now plays either New York or Baltimore, which trails the Knicks 3-2 with the Eastern Division series resuming Sunday at Baltimore.

It was an uphill fight for Milwaukee, however. The 76ers had an 85-82 advantage after the first three periods. The Bucks didn't get their first lead of the second half until Alcindor made good on a three-point play to put Milwaukee ahead 92-90 in the fourth period.

Bill Cunningham and Wally Jones kept the 76ers in contention until the waning moments. Cunningham scored 28 and Jones 26.

Chicago, with Chet Walker and Clem Haskins providing the scoring punch, breezed past Atlanta in the first period and the Hawks could never get the upper hand, although they led briefly after intermission.

Dick Motta, Chicago's coach, isn't ready to just hand the series to the Hawks in the fifth game at Atlanta Sunday.

Walker scored 39 points to lead Chicago while Haskins contributed 29. Joe Caldwell was high for the Hawks with 38 points.

In the American Basketball Association, still in regular season competition until April 15, it was Denver 105, New York 102; Carolina 107, Pittsburgh 83; and Dallas 148, Washington 144.

Casper Will Commute to Tournament

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Billy Casper will be commuting to Washington, D.C. between rounds of the $180,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament this week.

Casper, one of three men who have a million dollars in winnings on the pro tour, has been invited by President Nixon to a dinner at the White House Saturday night.

But the soft-spoken Casper already had committed himself to play in the rain-plagued Greensboro tournament when the invitation arrived and had to make arrangements to commute.

He will fly to Washington immediately after completing play Saturday, attend the dinner, then return to the 36-hole wind-up on Sunday.

"It's a rather tight schedule," he admitted, "but it's a great honor to be invited."

The first round, scheduled to be played Thursday, was washed out by a torrential rain storm that made the Sedgwick Country Club course unplayable.

Rockets Have Title Almost Wrapped Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Denver Rockets have just about wrapped up the Western Division championship in the American Basketball Association.

With Spencer Haywood tossing in 38 points and grabbing 23 rebounds the Rockets shaded the New York Nets 105-102 Friday night and took a 3½ game lead with five games to play.

Dallas beat Washington 148-144 and tied the Caps for the runnerup spot behind Denver. Carolina routed Pittsburgh 107-83 in the only other ABA game.

Denver led the Nets by only one point, 76-75, after three periods, but Haywood hit for 11 points to help the Rockets stay on top in the last quarter. Sonny Dove led the Nets with 25 points.

Glen Combs helped Dallas win its fourth straight game by scoring 30 points. Mike Barrett was high for Washington with 41. Rick Barry, Washington star, was ejected from the game in the second half following a scuffle with Ron Boone.

A 22-7 spurt in the last five minutes dented up Carolina's triumph over Pittsburgh. Rich Miemann led the Cougars with 21 points. John Brisker topped the Pipers with 17.

In the National Basketball Association, Milwaukee beat Philadelphia 115-106 and eliminated the 76ers from the playoffs, four games to one. Chicago stayed alive in its series with Atlanta by beating the Hawks 131-120.

White House to Send in Relief Hurler

A White House relief pitcher will launch baseball's 101st season Monday at Washington while Canada's young major league entry helps ring in the last Crosley Field opener at Cincinnati, where it all began.

Neither President Nixon nor Vice President Agnew will be on hand for the Washington Inaugural, which pits the Detroit Tigers, without Denny McLain, against Ted Williams' ambitious Senators.

Mickey Lolich is set to pitch for the Tigers in the absence of McLain, under suspension until July 1 for his 1967 gambling activities. Dick Bosman, American ERA king last year, will be the Washington starter.

David Eisenhower, Nixon's son-in-law and grandson of the former President, is a candidate to handle the traditional first-ball assignment.

At Cincinnati, where the Reds' forerunners began playing professionally in 1869, Jim Merritt will be on the mound for the home club against Joe Sparma and the Montreal Expos in the other traditional opening day game. The Reds are scheduled to shift from ancient Crosley Field to a new stadium in time to host the July 14 All-Star Game.

The spotlight shifts Tuesday to Milwaukee, new home of the ill-fated Seattle Pilots, which entertains California in its opener while all other clubs except St. Louis also swing into action. The Cardinals play their first game Wednesday at Montreal.

In Tuesday's other AL games, league titlist Baltimore is at Cleveland, Minnesota at Chicago, Boston at New York, Oakland at Kansas City and Detroit at Washington.

The world champion New York Mets visit Pittsburgh, Atlanta is at San Diego, Chicago at Philadelphia, Houston at San Francisco and Cincinnati at Los Angeles in National League play.

The Orioles have been tabbed solid 9-to-5 favorites by Las Vegas bookmakers to repeat in the AL and St. Louis is the 7-2 choice in the NL, followed by the Mets and San Francisco, at 9-2.

While President Nixon has put in a bullpen call for the Washington opener, Baltimore's Dave McNally, Boston's Gary Peters and Los Angeles' Claude Osteen appeared geared for distance as their clubs' opening day pitchers.

McNally, a 20-game winner for the Orioles last season, Peters, obtained by Boston in a winter trade with the White Sox, and Osteen, another 20 victory man, were the standouts among half a dozen hurlers who worked Friday exhibition games in final tuneups for Tuesday starting assignments.

The Orioles bowed to Montreal 3-2 at Arlington, Tex., despite McNally's three-hit, seven inning stint.

BYRON NELSON CHARTS MASTERS

Byron Nelson, a two-time winner of the Masters Tournament (1937 and 1942), in an interview with NEA's Marty Rabbofsky, selects the players he feels are most likely to win this year's tournament, and explains why.

BIG THREE?

'69- GEORGE ARCHER
'68- BOB GOALBY
'67- GAY BREWER

THEY'RE CROWDING US, ARNIE

REMEMBER WHEN THE MASTERS WAS VIRTUALLY A PRIVATE SPRING RITE?

Jack Nicklaus

Jack has been playing well in recent tournaments. He is coming up to the Masters near the top of his game. He likes the Augusta course and his long drives give him some advantage. He says he is not happy with his game, but I've seen him play and I think he is swinging well. Taking off the extra weight has helped Jack and I wouldn't be a bit surprised if he won it again.

Nicklaus

Arnold Palmer

Arnie is coming up to the Masters in great shape. He seems to have a fine mental attitude and is playing well. Still plagued by one bad round in every tournament, which he'll have to avoid, of course. He knows Augusta forward and backward and he likes the course. Arnie's been through it all before and, right now, I'd have to say he'll be around at the finish.

Palmer

Don January

Don played real well in winning the Jacksonville Open and seems to be at the peak of his game. He always plays Augusta well, although he's never won the Masters. He is a fine long-iron player and hits the ball high, which is necessary because of the hills on the course. I was impressed with the way he won at Jacksonville and I feel he'll make a strong showing at Augusta.

January

Billy Casper

Billy has to be considered a contender in any tournament he enters. He has never played well in the Masters, but that's not to say this couldn't be his year. He's stayed out at the tournaments in Florida because of his allergies and I really can't comment on his game at the moment. But he is tournament-wise and I know he is burning for a good showing at Augusta.

Casper

Grier Jones

Grier Jones could be the first real longshot to win the Masters in a long time. He has been playing extremely well and is improving every time I see him. He is thinking at all times, which impresses me. His game has been very strong of late and I think if any young player has an outside chance of winning it, he does.

Jones

Dale Douglass

Like Nicklaus and January, Dale gets the ball into the air very well and is an excellent long-iron player. In fact, his entire game has been impressive. He is a good swinger and a good putter in addition to being a good iron player. But, like Grier Jones, he could be hampered by not having been in the winner's circle enough. Winning any major tournament is easier the second time than the first.

Douglass

Of all the others in the Masters field, there are two players I'd rate as having chances of winning it. They are Tom Weiskopf and Bob Murphy. Weiskopf, especially, because he keeps the ball high. I think Frank Beard has a chance, but his game has not been too sharp of late. Gary Player certainly has the equipment, but I don't think he's in a relaxed state of mind. Last year's winner, George Archer, hasn't done much of anything since and I don't think he figures at all. A score of 278, or 279, or 280 will win it.

Can Maravich Sex-ceed Namath With Gal Fans

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Hy-po-thet-ical situation:
Let's suppose, for the sheer horror of it, that Joe Willie Namath — superstar and sex symbol of professional sports — quits football this fall in deference to a mass of scar tissue called knees.

Namath, who created more female interest in sports than anyone since Ben Hur, leaves a yawning hole in Americana that cannot be filled by four Joe Peppitones, two Tony Conigliaroes, three Lance Alworths and one slightly frayed Bo Belinsky.

Question: Is there anyone alive who can take Joe Willie Namath's place in the hearts of female fandom?

Answer: Probably not, but consider, if you will, young Pistol Pete Maravich.

Collegiate backgrounds are similar: Maravich at Louisiana State, Namath at Alabama; both outspoken, brash, roughly handsome, lean and, above all, charismatic. Pistol Pete and Broadway Joe.

Study Pete Maravich. Smoldering brown eyes. "The eyes of a lynx and the grace of a panther," they say. Coal-black hair, long. Appetite for girls, good times, fame. Talent like you never saw before. Confidence in that talent.

Study Joe Namath. Green eyes, smoldering. Coal-black hair, long. Same appetites, only more refined. Talent. Confidence. Bad legs.

Masters—Nice Little Men in Green Coats

AUGUSTA, Ga.—(NEA)—It's really fable, this tournament called The Masters.

It was put together by two men—one an austere Wall Street banker, the other an infirm Georgia gentleman. It's held at a private club so exclusive you almost have to be a president of the United States to get membership.

Its attitude is so imperious no general accounting is ever given the public. Its host city is undistinguished clutter and somnolent the other 361 days of the year.

It's not the most challenging test in golf. It doesn't even have the most representative field.

But it is the most important golf tournament in the world.

George Archer, a lanky stringbean; Bob Goalby, an erratic musclem; Gay Brewer, a slack-jawed Kentuckian — not memorable sports figures. But they each have one distinguishing achievement. They've won the Masters tournament and so for one brief moment became the biggest figures in golf.

They usurped, the last three years, the pedestal held by such lofty shotmakers as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player—the erstwhile Big Three.

And that pedestal is eagerly sought by every man who tromps a fairway for a living.

"For me," says Frank Beard, "it would be a financial bonanza." Like a man who won more than $175,000 last year and has won more than $100,000 each of the last three really needs the money.

"A Masters victory," explains Frank, "could be worth, over the next 15 years, a half-million dollars in money you wouldn't ordinarily have gotten."

But that's not what really motivates him or the other tourmen in golf.

"If I had a million in my pocket," continues Frank, "I'd still rather win the Masters than the U.S. Open."

"The public looks at the Open as a cold thing, all money. 'The Masters is nice little men in green coats in warm Augusta.'"

It's also the first flush of real spring, blooming azaleas, lush Bermuda grass, southern mansions and gnarled, spreading shade trees. The gentleman's and gentlewoman's life.

And so wherever golf is played and followed, the first full week in April belongs to the Masters with its sellout crowds and parking lots jammed with 10,000 cars.

All the players—Frank Beard, Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer—point to it, consciously or otherwise.

Beard, for instance, considers himself a businessman golfer. He has played in the Masters since 1964, finished in the top 10 twice, was only a stroke behind the leader going into the last round in 1968 and generally is satisfied with his performance.

"I try," he said, "not to treat the Masters different than any other tournament. I don't go out and hit a thousand balls."

"But this year I'm going to take Greensboro (Greater Greensboro Open) off to relax and reflect. I have never done it before, so maybe subconsciously I'm psyched by the Masters."

"I know this. The juices flow a little stronger. And not because of the money. Regardless of what the public or the bankers think, you want to win it for yourself. It pumps you up a little more."

That kind of incentive, as much as anything else, explains the fabled success of the genteel golf picnic first devised in 1934 by Cliff Roberts (the austere banker) and Bobby Jones (the Georgia gentleman).

The Distinctive Dresser

A fashion writer says the wide necktie is a small male protest to gain some of the distinctive qualities that have attended women's apparel for a decade.

In reality the American male was doing his own thing with styles for several generations while his wife was relegated to the home. If her attire was somewhat standard, the man wore powdered wigs, knee britches and silk stockings. He went on to jumboswing coats, batwing collars and flowing ties. His jewelry—a gold watch, chain, knife, fob, ring and medallions made from gold coins—far outshone his wife's.

He wore cocked and then stove-pipe hats, soft straws and sailors, derbies, snazzy caps and rakish felts. He wore fancy blazers, Norfolk jackets, brightly colored vests, plus fours, peg-leg pants, button shoes, duck trousers, white shoes, and part of the time he carried a cane and wore spats. He wore military and opera capes, raglans, long fur coats, racoon coats, all sorts of overcoats and, lest we forget, green and yellow slickers with matching rain hats.

Of course, women began expressing their personalities in changing styles about 50 years ago, but the male had been a walking fashion plate, or so he certainly thought, for about 200 years before the female began her "revolution." Indeed, when the housewife still wore cotton stockings, the husband couldn't put his best foot forward without silk socks.—Raleigh (N.C.) News and Observer

A Trillion-Dollar Decade?

If the bottom doesn't fall out, this nation will have a trillion dollar economy (gross national product) before its 200th birthday in 1976. Perhaps this year, almost certainly no later than next year, the GNP milestone will be reached. Ten years after that, predicted the business weekly Impact recently, the GNP will have doubled. With the current emphasis on slowing down the economy to counter inflation, what would at any other time be a pleasantly staggering possibility to contemplate must add up to a two trillion dollar Presidential headache.—Chattanooga (Tenn.) Whereabouts of Rap Brown Still Unknown

NEW YORK (AP) — Where is H. Rap Brown?

The militant black power leader has been missing 26 days. He was last seen March 8 by his wife when he left here for a Bel Air, Md., court appearance, according to his attorney, William Kunstler.

"We've had no word whatsoever. It's incomprehensible why we haven't heard from him," declared Kunstler, who says he doesn't know where Brown is.

Brown's wife could not be reached. The FBI says it does not know Brown's whereabouts. Brown was to stand trial on charges of arson and incitement to riot stemming from a 1967 disturbance in Cambridge, Md. The trial has been reset for April 20 in Elliott City.

Dorchester County State's Atty. William B. Yates Jr. prosecutor in the case, said, "I have nothing to base any conjecture on, but I think he'll appear for trial."

Yates said the additional seven-year penalty for not showing might be some incentive for Brown to appear.

"I feel this, really, that he's not dead," Kunstler said Thursday. "And I think his wife shares that feeling. I think that somewhere, sometime he'll turn up and make a statement."

"If he's underground," Kunstler said, "it would be hard for him to tell anyone. How do you communicate? By letter? By phone? Then you give yourself away."

The doorman at Mrs. Brown's apartment house in Upper Manhattan said Thursday he hasn't seen Brown, "in weeks, maybe months." He also had not seen Mrs. Brown recently, and no one answered the door at her apartment.

Guatemala Refuses Demands

By ELOY AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
GUATEMALA (AP) — Emulating Argentina, the Guatemalan government refused Thursday night to release 16 prisoners in exchange for West German Ambassador Karl Von Spreti, kidnapped by leftist terrorists four days ago.

After meeting for seven hours, President Julio Cesar Mendez and his Cabinet declared a 30-day state of siege. They imposed curfews and press censorship, forbade all political activity, and authorized security forces to make arrests and searches without warrants or court orders.

A communique said the government could not release the 16 prisoners because 11 of them already have been tried and sentenced.

It said this situation "differs radically" from previous kidnappings of diplomats because the prisoners exchanged for their freedom were awaiting trial.

Interference by the executive branch in matters under court jurisdiction "would constitute a flagrant violation of the constitution," the communique said.

A German Embassy spokesman commented: "It is the duty of the host country to protect the life of the ambassador of a friendly nation."

The government appealed "to the most elemental human principles of those who have the ambassador in their power that they respect the right of freedom and life of the representative of a friendly nation and that they may understand that it is totally impossible for the government to agree to their request."

Four political prisoners were freed in exchange for Holly and Fuentes Mohr. Five of the 16 prisoners whose release is now being demanded reportedly have been charged with those kidnappings.

He Just Had That Old Feeling That Something Would Be Very Wrong

By CHUCK NOLAND
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES (AP) — "There it is," I told the lady at the Polk County Courthouse as she looked through her book to see how much it would cost to transfer my car's registration from New Mexico to Iowa. "A model 300 deluxe, two-door sedan. That's it."

"Wait a minute," she said after a few seconds. "There's something wrong here."

Somewhat, you just knew it was going to be one of those experiences.

"According to the serial number on your New Mexico registration certificate you're driving a two-door station wagon," she said.

I've been driving that car for over two years, and while there are a lot of things I don't know about it, I'm pretty sure it's a two-door sedan. I told her so. I don't think she believed me.

She called her supervisor over, explained the problem to him. The number listed on the registration certificate indicated the car was indeed a two-door sedan. But the first five numbers of the car's serial number—which are supposed to be the same as the registration number—indicated it was a two-door station wagon.

"Oh, that's the problem," said the supervisor.

"It's a two-door sedan," I mumbled, beginning to doubt my convictions.

I invited anyone who was interested to step outside and examine my two-door sedan. That was my second mistake.

"Even if it is a sedan, we can't correct the registration," the supervisor said. "The state boys would have to do that."

Trying to calculate the value of my time, I asked how much more it would cost to register a station wagon. I should have known I couldn't get away with it.

So, some time later, I found myself at the vehicle registration office of the Iowa Department of Public Safety, being ushered into a cubicle.

"Would you look at my car and tell if it's a two-door sedan or a two-door station wagon?" I asked.

He didn't appreciate my little joke. But he did come outside, where he determined to his satisfaction that my car was indeed a two-door sedan and that there was a typographical error in the serial number listed on the registration slip.

We went back inside and he called the supervisor at the county courthouse to tell him what had happened and advise him it would be all right to register my two-door sedan temporarily until I can write New Mexico and get the serial number straightened out on my title.

But by this time it was 4:30 and the offices were closed, so I had to wait and do it all over again Friday.

I hope they spell my name right. It might take an act of the legislature to correct that.

Revenue Fails Keep Up With Expections

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A report prepared by the Research Department of the Legislative Council shows that general revenue collections for the first nine months of the 1969-70 fiscal year are not increasing fast enough to fully fund the Revenue Stabilization Act.

The report shows an increase of 12.5 per cent in general revenue collections over the first nine months of the 1968-69 fiscal year, but an increase of 14.15 per cent is required this year to fully fund the Revenue Stabilization Act.

The Act is enacted by the legislature for each fiscal year to divide the state's general revenues among the state agencies that are supported by it.

49 School Districts in Trouble

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's office revealed Friday that the Justice Department is prepared to bring legal action to bring 49 Arkansas school districts into compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The governor said he had been advised by the Justice Department and the White House staff of impending action against the districts.

A spokesman for the Justice Department said at Washington that Jerris Leonard, assistant attorney general in the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, had said last month that statewide desegregation suits were being considered against several states, including Arkansas. The spokesman had no further comment.

Mrs. Mary McLeod, Rockefeller's adviser on education, said the legal action apparently would be against the state Board of Education and not the individual districts. She said the governor's office had been advised that the Justice Department would mail a notification of a "citizen's complaint" against the Board of Education. She said she did not know who filed the "citizen's complaint."

Apparently, the Justice Department will accuse the districts of failure to erase the dual identity of their school system.

The governor said in a news release that he had written Leonard asking the Justice Department to delay taking action against the districts. The governor told Leonard that he had no authority to act for the state Board of Education but "I would like to use my office to request a delay of formal action in order to allow the remaining districts to comply on their own initiative."

Rockefeller said he believed the districts would prefer to comply voluntarily with the law. The governor urged state Education Commissioner A. W. Ford and members of the state Board of Education to aid the districts in drawing up desegregation plans that would be approved by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The governor said that if the extension were granted, he would assist the state board in every way he could.

Included among the districts the Justice Department said were not in compliance, according to Rockefeller's statement, are Pine Bluff, Stuttgart, Texarkana, Hot Springs, Newport, Dollarway and Helena-West Helena.

Other districts are Arkansas City, Ashdown, Augusta-Woodruff County, Barton-Lexa, Bradley, Brinkley, Chicot County, Clarendon, Collins, Cotton Plant, Dermott, Desha, Earle, Elaine, Emmett, England, Eudora, Grubbs, Hazen, Holly Grove, Hughes, Lake Village, Lawson, Linwood, Lonoke, Marion, Palestine, Parkin, Phillips County, Plum Bayou, Portland, Shawnee, Stamps, Star City, Stephens, Thornton, Turrell, Urbana, Vilonia, Wabaska, Watson Chapel and Wells Bayou.

12 More to Be Tried in Chicago

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has used the controversial "Rap Brown" antiriot law against the radical left for a second time, indicting 12 SDS Weatherman leaders the Justice Department's top criminal lawyer calls "open Marxists."

The 12, including police fugitive Kathy Boudin and chief Weatherman Mark Rudd, were accused Thursday of conspiring to incite—and participating in—violence during the "four days of rage" sponsored by the militant faction of Students for a Democratic Society last Oct. 8-11 in Chicago.

The indictments by a Chicago federal grand jury came less than two months after the tumultuous trial of the Chicago 7—first defendants to be tried under the 1968 antiriot law—closed in the court of U.S. District Judge Julius J. Hoffman.

Many Reasons Why Old Postal Stamp Hike Sure to Hit Trouble

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

The city of Washington, Arkansas, in Hempstead County has many reasons for being called "historical Washington." Not the least of these is the important part it has played in Freemasonry in Arkansas.

The most important Mason in our state's history, Albert Pike, moved to Washington after he resigned from the Confederate Army. While residing in the home of his friend, Col. Etter, he wrote most of his "Morals and Dogma," a compendium of the philosophy and tenets of Freemasonry and other Masonic works. In addition to being called the father of the Scottish Rite, Pike is remembered for his distinguished role as a general in the Confederate Army and as an associate justice in the Arkansas Supreme Court.

With the Yankee invasion of Little Rock in 1863, the Masonic headquarters was moved from Little Rock to Washington when the state leaders, records and courts were transferred. In view of this fact, in 1963 the old state capitol in Washington was given to the Masons. The Masonic Grand Lodge of Arkansas erected an impressive gray monument in front of the old capitol to honor the memory of those Masons who served their state and nation during the years of the Civil War.

The impressive ceremony on July 4, 1963 was similar to the laying of cornerstones at a public building, a practice of Masonic Lodges in America for 200 years or more, and earlier in the British Isles. The laying of cornerstones was a tradition inherited by the stone masons of England in the period between the 10th and 17th centuries.

The ceremony was solemn and instructive with the American, Arkansas and Confederate flags carried by members of the U.S. Army and the square, the compass, the plumb and the gavel used with symbolic meaning.

Next Monday, the Grand Master of Arkansas, Carmack A. Nelson, will head a group of Master Masons and their families who will have a supper meeting at 7 p.m. at the New Mount Horeb Lodge No. 695. Those attending will hear an inspiring message on Masonry from the Grand Master at this meeting in Washington.

J. Lee Overstreet, Grand Junior Deacon of the Grand Lodge of Arkansas, will sketch the history of the host lodge, one of the four oldest in the state that was originally chartered in 1838. This speaker, a resident of Texarkana, is the first man from the Texarkana area to be elected to the Grand Lodge of Arkansas in about 60 years.

Numerous other dignitaries are expected to attend, including

India Refuses to Serve as Observer

By T. JEFF WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — India has refused to act as neutral observer at the release of the hijacked American munitions ship Columbia Eagle and 13 of its crew, informed sources reported today.

The Indian Embassy refused to comment on the subject, but the informants said it turned down overtures from the Cambodian government. Presumably the Indians want no connection with the chartered freighter's cargo of bombs for the U.S. Air Force in Thailand.

Cambodian Premier Gen. Lon Nol told a news conference Wednesday that the ship could be released any time, but added that his government wanted neutral observers present.

The freighter was hijacked three weeks ago by two young American seamen who were granted political asylum in Cambodia.

Meanwhile, Radio Phnom Penh accused Communist China of meddling in Cambodian affairs and charged that Peking is helping the deposed chief of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, in his bid to return to power.

Elbert Davis, the current Worshipful Master of Pike Lodge No. 91 at Murfreesboro, who is a leading mason of Southwest Arkansas. He will serve as Worshipful Master at a meeting of Master Masons following the supper.

Massachusetts Challenges Vietnam War

BOSTON (AP) — The state of Massachusetts prepared today a Supreme Court challenge of the use of U.S. armed forces in the Vietnam fighting without an express congressional mandate.

Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn said he would seek a quick test of a new state law providing that as matters stand servicemen from Massachusetts can refuse to take part in such hostilities.

Quinn said 19-year-old John J. O'Brien of Medford, a soldier under orders for shipment to Vietnam April 19, already had offered himself for a legal test.

The law went into the books Thursday with the signature of Republican Gov. Francis W. Sargent, who commented:

"The issue is whether and when, under our Constitution, a citizen can be compelled to engage in a conflict that lacks a congressional declaration of war."

The new state law says that in the absence of such a declaration, servicemen from Massachusetts are authorized to decline assignment to fighting which is "not an emergency" and "not otherwise authorized in the powers granted to the President as Commander in Chief."

Under the constitution the right to declare war is specifically vested in Congress.

The state law requires the Massachusetts attorney general to represent any Massachusetts serviceman seeking its protection.

Sargent said, "The bill is sincere, but its effects are doubtful. If signing this bill will bring an answer from the U.S. Supreme Court, then I believe America will be well served by this act."

Legal experts said Quinn's first move would be a motion before the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court for permission to file a complaint with the U.S. Supreme Court.

If the U.S. Supreme Court declined to entertain the complaint, Quinn then could bring it in a U.S. District Court with the idea of working his way up to the Supreme Court by a longer judicial process.

Quinn said he would take an "active part" in presenting the case before the Supreme Court, saying that he may argue the case himself.

He said he expects that the earliest the case could receive a full hearing would be the October session of the Supreme Court. Meanwhile, he said, Massachusetts citizens should obey military orders—even to the extent of going into combat.

O'Brien said of his offer to be the test subject, "I'm under orders to go, and I'll go. I'm not far left or anything like that, but why not challenge?"

O'Brien said he heard about the bill while in airborne training at Ft. Benning, Ga.

The governor said he told the President while in Washington on other matters last week that he might sign the bill, but that Nixon made no comment.

State Rep. H. James Shea, D-Newton, who filed the bill, said it demonstrated to "young people that our system can function."

"We have demonstrated to the Congress and to the President that the people will not sit idly by while the fundamental law of this nation is either abrogated by one branch of government or appropriated by another," Shea said.

Col. Paul F. Feeney, deputy director of the Selective Service in Massachusetts, said he does not believe the state law will survive a court challenge.

The attorney general acknowledged that the Supreme Court had refused in 1967 to hear the case of a man who claimed the war in Vietnam was unconstitutional.

By BILL NEIKIRK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Initial congressional reaction has raised the possibility that trouble lies ahead for President Nixon's proposal to raise the price of a first-class postage stamp from 6 to 10 cents.

"A 10-cent first-class stamp is unconscionable," Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., chairman of the Senate Post Office Committee, declared Friday after Nixon's proposal was sent to Congress.

The proposed increase was part of a package plan Nixon offered to finance a 6 per cent wage increase the government promised all federal workers under terms of an agreement reached Thursday.

Government and postal union negotiators worked out the 6 per cent agreement, along with an additional boost of 8 per cent for postal workers only that would be effective when Congress approves Nixon's postal reform plan.

The agreement halted the immediate threat of a new postal workers' strike but it raised financing problems for the President.

Nixon's message left unanswered what will be done about the current 10-cent air mail rate. Assistant Postmaster General James W. Hargrove said the question is under study, adding the air mail rate might be merged with the first-class charge.

The first-class stamp proposal would bring in $2.3 billion annually, Nixon said. Raising charges on other types of mail would produce another $300 million.

Under the proposal, parcel post would cost 15 per cent more, so-called "junk" advertising mail an extra 5 per cent, second-class mailings 12 per cent, and single-piece third-class mail, 67 per cent.

The President also proposed a speedup in collection of estate and gift taxes to produce a revenue windfall of $1.5 billion in the 1971 fiscal year. That, coupled with mail cost increases and money already budgeted for federal pay increases, would pay for Thursday's agreement, Nixon said.

But McGee said it is out of the question to "load the burden of paying for this significant move in the area of labor-management relations on the one class of mail that pays its own way. We are going to have to talk about and consider a more equitable distribution of this load."
